July, 2013

Next monthly meeting:

July 16, 2013,

Deaconess Hospital Cafeteria,
Lower Level, Straight Street

Seemingly endless days of heat and oppressive humidity — welcome to my birth month, July. As a child my mother often told the story of how uncomfortable she was in the lead-up to my arrival. Nearly 60 years ago not that many public spaces were air conditioned, with the notable exception of movie theaters. As if on cue, last week the blather of a local newscast spilled out the words “record high today in 1954.” Cutting through the fog in my half-listening brain I sympathized with her experience. Not that heat and humidity always bothered me. Up until my teens, summer was for outside adventures, playing baseball, goofing around in the woods, digging holes in the field next door, directing the hundreds of toy soldiers in my command.

When the magic moment of puberty arrived, the ability to shrug off heat departed. The long summer days that had seemed so short for all those activities became structured for survival. Up very early to cut the grass, just light enough to see, in by 10:30 a.m. to avoid the rising heat. Hibernating in the basement building things until after the sun receded, only making forays upstairs to visit the kitchen or the bathroom. On Saturday, stay up all night watching Bob Shreve’s vaudevillian antics and mediocre movies.

Having a birthday in July was a great experience. Even though you didn’t get the call-out during the school year like others, July isn’t close to any other present-worthy occasions. Far enough away from the start of school to discourage clothing choices, any gift of toys would be utilized immediately, no waiting for temperate weather like you had to do at Christmas.

Fireworks, another July staple, weren’t even that special since Rozzi’s was right up the street. They donated heavily to Loveland to keep from being annexed. It must have worked for the city line still stops right at their former property line. Rozzi’s put on unofficial displays as well, on several occasions they had spontaneous eruptions, you just had to walk out to the front yard to see the event.

Since the all-volunteer fire department was three doors down, the parade of arriving rescue workers in all their horn blowing, siren wailing, tire squealing glory would arrive at the station, to be followed after a short interval by the siren wailing, horn blowing, light flashing scramble out of the station. To this day I have never witnessed a fire company with such a penchant for sonic disruptance — almost as if they could quash the blaze with noise.

Named after the most famous Roman of them all, July is the first of only two successive months with equal numbers of days. Augustus could equal Julius, not usurp him.

Although June is the official start to summer, it doesn’t usually get cooking until July; an event, if you remember this time last year with temperatures of 104°. Lest you get the idea that I hate summer, it ain’t so — relaxing with a libation in the evening after surviving another hot day, watching the spiritual magic of lightning bugs, seeing dragonflies dart to and fro, feeling the cool breeze, watching the stars and satellites overhead, after it finally becomes dark.

I really can’t imagine living anywhere without four distinct seasons. Have a happy summer!

The Shape of Things to Come: the Future of the CUF Business District

What would you like the business district to look like?

Now's your opportunity to contribute to a process that will change the future of the business district. The city and CUFNA will be working together to replace the current zoning with a "form-based code". Anyone in CUF--residents, businesses, and other organizations--can be involved in the process.

Developing a form-based code

CUFNA will work with the city Planning Department to develop a vision for the neighborhood that includes desirable building height, façade, a building's relationship to the sidewalk, etc. "Visioning" is the architectural design process that develops a form-based code to replace the existing use-based code. (The existing use-based zoning with its focus on permitted land uses such as "residential" or "commercial" does not regulate form and appearance the way a form-based code does. A form-based code is a better way to preserve the character of the neighborhood.)

The visioning process culminates in a "charette" where the proposed vision for the neighborhood is presented. The charette is a public input session. All community stakeholders can attend. Real estate developers, residents, and businesses can express their issues and give feedback on the proposed form-based code. The city's Planning Department evaluates this public input to settle upon a final recommendation for changes to current zoning that it presents to the Planning Committee in a public hearing. If approved, the recommendation then goes before City Council.

The Process Begins

When City Council approved an Interim Development Control District (IDC) for the CUF business district on April 10, 2013, it set the stage for CUFNA to work on a form-based code. The IDC is a temporary measure, but with it in place, the city Planning Department must review and approve any proposed changes in the business district. An IDC does not prevent development, but requiring Planning Department approval is a measure of protection while the neighborhood is working on a form-based code. (The IDC is unrelated to the process seeking historic landmark designation for the Goetz House.)

Developing a form-based code for CUF is expected to take about two years, but the Planning Department cannot work with CUFNA before completing work on form-based codes already underway in several other neighborhoods. Since IDCs can be extended, CUF's initial 90-day IDC is expected to be extended.

Apartment Overcrowding

From Edward Cunningham at Cincinnati Buildings and Inspections: "We ask that if neighbors suspect more than five unrelated individuals are living in a single family house or a single dwelling unit, they file a complaint so overcrowding can be investigated." Register the specific address(es) of overcrowded housing to City Services at 513-591-6000 or 591-6000.com.

Toolbank

The Cincinnati Community ToolBank offers an inventory of tools—shovels, rakes, drills and so much more—to help nonprofit organizations, religious and educational institutions, community groups and their volunteers increase their impact.

The Cincinnati ToolBank is part of a national network of tool-lending programs and comes as the result of nearly one year of collaboration between greater Cincinnati leaders.

The Cincinnati ToolBank inventory will feature more than 140 types of tools available for community projects. Charitable organizations may borrow high-quality tools—shovels, ladders, drills, wheelbarrows, and other essential tools—to increase the impact of volunteers while reducing expenses. Membership is required (free) and a nominal rental fee is charged. For more information, visit their web site: <http://www.cincinnati.toolbank.org/Home.aspx>

CUF board member candidates

The 2013 election of CUF board members will take place at the July meeting. Thanks to all who have come forward to run for the open positions. Here are the candidates' statements:

Christian Huelsman

After having lived in Clifton for 5 years, I moved to the Hollister Triangle in CUF in August 2012. I held a seat as a Clifton Town Meeting trustee for 3 years, from 2009 to 2012, during which I started its green committee, organizing the Great American Cleanup and Make A Difference Day for several outings. In 2011, I co-founded Spring in Our Steps, a community organization that cleans up public stairways and alleys, in order to repurpose them as community connections and event spaces. To date, I have spear-headed nearly 90 community cleanup projects. I fuse my planning expertise with my love for community and public visioning in my work, in order to redefine what it means to engage our neighbors. Our streets should be clean, safe, groomed, and well-lit. Important issues in CUF should receive a balanced input process, to give stakeholders an opportunity for their voices to affect positive change. Our community funds should be utilized more effectively to invoke a more positive experience in CUF, for residents and visitors alike. My background in urban planning, neighborhood leadership, and long-term community visioning and enhancement makes me well equipped to serve on the CUFNA board.

Craig Lloyd

I have been a CUF resident for over 30 years and have served on our neighborhood association as a trustee, newsletter editor and NSP manager. I am a UC alum and an educator. Among the issues that I am interested in for this community is increasing owner occupancy which calls for continued residents' involvement in crime prevention and improving/maintaining both the streetscape and the housing stock. Our efforts over the years have made a difference in an area of the city that has tremendous possibilities.

John Stork

I am a librarian at UC and have lived in CUF for over 10 years. Between work and home, I have a strong commitment to the betterment of the neighborhood and I previously served on the CUFNA Board for six years as president and membership secretary. I would like to help CUFNA work toward developing a stronger partnership with UC in addressing issues in our community such as homeownership, tenant stewardship, and neighborhood upkeep.

Carolyn Young

After several years of living as a Renter in Cincinnati's Eastside Neighborhoods (Pleasant Ridge and Oakley), I purchased my very first home in September of 2002 in the CUF Area, specifically Fairview Heights. I am a very proud member of both the CUF Neighborhood and West McMicken Improvement Associations. Prior to purchasing my home, I had always enjoyed visiting CUF and the Clifton Gaslight areas for their diversity of people, restaurants, and entertainment (i.e. Esquire Theatre). Upon moving into my home, I was immediately welcomed into the neighborhood by my closest neighbors in the vicinity of Halstead and Straight Streets, and soon became equally welcomed by other neighbors and friends in the surrounding West McMicken/CUF area. Throughout the years, I have had to travel and live for extended periods of time away from my home for Army Reserve Training and Mobilizations. My closest neighbors and others within our Community were extremely helpful and supportive during those times of absence. I honestly feel that our neighborhood and community is one of the best places to live in Cincinnati, and hope that I can contribute as positively to this Board as so many other members and role models before me have contributed throughout the years.

Cherie Walpe

I am a native Cincinnati and graduate of UC. I have lived in the CUF area for the last 18 years. As a homeowner and parent, I believe it is necessary to participate in and help shape what happens to our community. Having this forum (CUFna) to meet and discuss these issues is an important part of attracting people to and retaining members of our community.
