Personal Editorial

We have had some lively discussions lately at Community Council meetings about public service cutbacks. Although we know this phenomenon is widespread throughout the world's industrial nations, we probably feel it most personally right here in the CUF neighborhood.

In addition to being a consequence of poor fiscal management and economic excess, it also can be traced to the increasing diversity of societies everywhere. Diversity brings with it new interests, values, and modes of expression, all competing for legitimacy and recognition.

As just one example, compare the range of television programming today with that available fifty years ago ... three channels (maybe four, if you had a tall antenna and could pull in Dayton) versus ... uh, how many now on cable or via satellite? So, unless it's something highly touted like the Superbowl, you won't hear everybody at work the next day scandalized by what Ozzie said to Harriet last night! But there is everything from erudite PBS specials to female mud wrestling (where the phrase costume failure came from), twenty-four and seven.

Locally, the need to service wide-ranging public needs means that resources get spread very thinly. We see it in longer waits in everything from calls to departments at City Hall to slow emergency responses. Or, if someone at the other end has to choose among simultaneous requests, no response at all.

It wasn't always like this. And in case the incremental gradualness has escaped your notice, ask older residents about the level of customary public services fifty years ago. Perhaps they'll remember street sweepings every week, garbage pickup twice weekly (with city-provided trashcan setout to the curb), and two mail deliveries a day. The cutbacks began when government took on other pressing needs, and long before fiscal crises became popular subjects of daily conversation.

If we value those civic services, we cannot take them for granted. We must make our preferences known to elected representatives. And the best way to begin that process is to become more positively involved in our CUF Community Council. (Next meeting: Tuesday, February 21, 7:30 p.m.) And bring a friend or neighbor, too.

In the meantime, we can all contribute by demonstrating our personal involvement in every aspect of community support, from remodeling to recycling to learning the arcane art of parallel parking to picking up stray wrappers in the yard.

Blight is contagious, but hopefully so is demonstrated civic pride.

The City of Cincinnati will implement new trash collection routes effective March 5. Approximately 50,000 homes will experience a change in trash collection day and/or recycling collection week. Public Services will mail a postcard to all affected residents with detailed information about their day and/or week change. In addition, Director Andrew Glenn will visit all affected community councils prior to March 5 to briefly discuss the changes and address any concerns or questions. Summer swimming

Why do we need to teach our children about swimming? What is water familiarity and why is it important?

Start with understanding the obstacles for enjoying swimming. People might be afraid of looking silly in the water the first time they enter or that they will not have any natural swimming aptitude. We do not live near a body of water that we rely on for our livelihoods so we have become less familiar with aquatics. People might worry about drowning or panicking in the water and losing control. These things might keep people from a potential life-saving skill.

Having community pools allow our children and neighbors to become acclimated to swimming in a safe environment. Shallow pools are a great first step in becoming familiar with the water. Not only does it allow fun and family time together, but people might use the swimming pool as a jumping off point for future exercise and even relaxation/meditation. Many colleges now mandate swimming aptitude tests during the college years to help our citizenry know how to tread water and do basic life-saving swimming.

For those who struggle with low back problems and for those who are pregnant and need an exercise that allows for a degree of weightlessness, swimming is an excellent vehicle to still have activity.

For parents and grandparents, it is another way you can invest in your children. I stress fun, but also teaching our children how to use a pool responsibly gives them another lifelong skill. Water familiarity can be life-saving! While we may try to avoid water at all costs, anyone who has lived through flooding or who has been out in nature knows that sometimes crossing bodies of water is inevitable.

Please support our neighborhood pools and use the Fairview Pool this summer. We are dangerously close to losing this resource. Please do not deny your fellow citizens the ability to gain water familiarity and another site for recreation in those hot summer months!

What is Hypertension?

Hypertension, or high blood pressure, is a common disease affecting 1 in 3 adults in the U.S. It means an increase in the pressure and force of blood pumping against the blood vessels.

It is important because, even though you might not have any symptoms, it can lead to problems with your heart, blood vessels, kidneys, eyes, and brain.

Risks for high blood pressure are age, lifestyle (smoking, high salt diets, lack of physical activity), obesity, ethnicity, and gender. Age is one of the most common risk factors and the chance of developing hypertension rises with age. And unfortunately for us guys, we are more likely to develop high blood pressure.

Know your blood pressure numbers. You might hear people say "My blood pressure usually runs 130 over 80). The top number is the systolic number (the pressure when the heart is pumping), and the bottom number (the pressure when the heart is resting in between beats). Normal numbers for most people should run less than 140 on the top number and less than 90 for the bottom number.

Think of your body as a wonderful automobile or car. You would take it in for regular maintenance to make sure the tires, brakes, and engine are all in good working order, wouldn't you? Think of your body the same way. Visit your primary care doctor and have regular surveillance for this potential healthcare threat and for possible treatment.

A great resource on this subject can be found at the National Heart Lung and Blood Institute: <http://www.nhlbi.nih.gov/health/health-topics/topics/hbp/>
